Tip Number (3) - Have as little contact as possible after you breakup. If you work together or have classes together, this can be difficult but remember to be civil. Try treating one another as an acquaintance rather than the person you were just with. The space allows you to understand what your life could be like without one another. You can also lay to rest any feelings of frustration and hurt that typically ensues after a breakup.

Tip Number (4) - Avoid following your feelings at this point. Any choice you make regarding your ex needs to be made with logic. If you make the choice, stay with it too. During this time, your brain knows more than your heart about what to do.
